

College of Communication and Information Graduate Student Teaching Award

The University of Tennessee's College of Communication and Information is seeking nominations for its annual Graduate Student Teaching Award. This award recognizes outstanding classroom instruction by a current graduate student in the college. A monetary award accompanies the honor.

Nomination Procedure

- All current graduate teaching assistants and associates are eligible to be nominated.
- Nominations can originate from any of four sources: self, students (graduate or undergraduate), faculty, or School Director.

Required Materials

Individuals who wish to pursue this award must submit the following required materials via email by March 10th:

- A teaching philosophy;
- Standard TCAP evaluation forms for the previous spring and fall (summer, if applicable); and
- One recent (previous calendar year) course syllabus that best reflects the nominee's approach to classroom instruction.

Optional Materials

The nominee may also submit the following optional (testimonial) materials:

- Qualitative evaluation comments from students; and/or
- Notes/emails from current and former students who were enrolled in the nominee's classes during the year in consideration. These should not be solicited to support the nomination but rather written previously and voluntarily by students.

The Graduate Studies committee will review submitted materials in late March and notify the Dean of their decision.

Nominations should be sent to Suzie Allard, Chair of the Graduate Studies Committee. Electronic nomination packets are required and should be emailed to sallard@utk.edu

Nominations are due by March 10, 2014

College of Communication and Information Graduate Student Research Award

The University of Tennessee's College of Communication and Information is seeking nominations for its annual Graduate Student Research Award. This award recognizes outstanding research and creative activity by a current graduate student in the college. A monetary award accompanies the honor.

Nomination Procedure

- All current graduate students are eligible to be nominated.
- Nominations can originate from any of four sources: self, graduate students, faculty, or School Director.

Required Materials

Individuals who wish to pursue this award must submit the following required materials via email by March 10th:

- A research philosophy;
- The nominee's best "piece" of research or creative activity (as selected by the nominee) from the two previous calendar years (research must have been published, presented, or in-press during 2012 or 2013). Research "pieces" include, but are not limited to, refereed journal articles; refereed conference proceedings; refereed books or book chapters; examples of juried or other refereed creative works; refereed monographs; non-refereed journal articles; non-refereed conference proceedings; non-refereed books or book chapters; non-refereed monographs; examples of other creative works; and
- A current vita.

The nominee may also submit the following optional (testimonial) materials: Anything that has been published about the submission (e.g., reviews, award nominations, etc.).

The Graduate Studies committee will review submitted materials in late March and notify the Dean of their decision.

Nominations should be sent to Suzie Allard, Chair of the Graduate Studies Committee. Electronic nomination packets are required and should be emailed to sallard@utk.edu

Nominations are due by March 10, 2014