

From: James Watling
Subject: Diversity Post-doctoral Teaching Fellowship in Biology, John Carroll University

The Department of Biology at John Carroll University seeks candidates for a Diversity Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow who share our commitment to diversity and inclusion, student-centered teaching and learning, and rigorous research scholarship. We seek candidates who have demonstrated experience with, and commitment to, diversity in a variety of ways. Additionally, we desire candidates who will embrace the department's emphasis on evolution, the environment, and ethics in science.

Candidates must have a Ph.D. by the anticipated start date of August 25, 2017. Area of teaching and research interest is open; however, to best support the candidate's interests and needs, we seek applicants who can identify a faculty research mentor(s) within the department. This position offers attractive compensation including housing, benefits, conference travel funding, faculty development, and a stipend consistent with the national average for first-year postdocs.

To apply, please submit by January 16, 2017 a portfolio of materials that emphasizes your commitment to broadening participation in science through teaching and research mentorship, including: letter of interest; curriculum vitae; teaching philosophy; research statement; unofficial transcripts; and three reference letters (under separate cover) to Diversity Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow Search Committee, Department of Biology, John Carroll University, 1 John Carroll Blvd., University Heights, OH 44118. Application materials also may be sent electronically to Dr. Rebecca Drenovsky, Biology Department Chair (rdrenovsky@jcu.edu); however, reference letters must come from the letter writer.
