Comparative Animal Physiologist: One-Year Visiting Position at the College of Wooster

The Biology Department invites applications for a full time one-year position as Comparative Animal Physiologist beginning August 2017. Duties will include teaching an introductory Biology course focused on ecology, evolution, and organismal biology; a sophomore-level course in biostatistics and experimental design; and an upper-level course in comparative animal physiology. The successful candidate will also direct undergraduate research in the College's required Independent Study Program.

Applicants should have a PhD or anticipate completion by fall 2017, and be eligible to work in the U.S.; postdoctoral research and/or teaching experience preferred. The College of Wooster enrolls a diverse student body (19% domestic students of color and 10% international students); applicants should demonstrate their ability to work with diverse student populations. Applicants should submit a curriculum vitae, statements of research and teaching philosophy, unofficial transcripts, and three letters of recommendation via Interfolio
