

GEOG 442: URBAN SPACES/URBAN SOCIETY, FALL 2018: DR. M. SHARMA
[MSHARMA3@UTK.EDU]: BGB 301: TUES/THURSDAYS: 11.10AM-12:25PM

OVERVIEW

This course will focus on the social relations and the complex ways in which various elements of human diversity such as race/ethnicity, nationality, culture, class, gender, sexuality, age and education interact with each other and within the built environments to produces spaces and opportunities of difference.

Learning Objectives: Upon successful completion of this course, you will be able to

(i) Production and consumption of space and interactions among various social groups that are divided based on race, color, class, lifecycle, nationality, religion sexuality, etc., (ii) How/why geography affects the above, (iii) Use the various theories/frameworks to explain human mobility and settlements patterns that create varied social & economic landscapes, (iv) Why/how the socio-economic characteristics and skills associated with human beings residing in different regions/locations of the world relate with their economic engagement in certain types of activities & vice-versa that also creates a distinct spatial division of labor and hence a distinct regionality, (v) Recognize and relate to the local, regional, and global changes and challenges through geographic research and technical writing by engaging into writing assignments and in-class discussions.

Through lectures, class/group-discussions, movie critiques, and short writing assignments, this course will introduce students to the basic concepts of urban spaces and urban society, especially within the context of contemporary USA. We will also read and discuss few case studies from Europe, Latin America and the fast globalizing, newly industrializing and developing countries from Asia and Africa.

Topics include: Origin of cities, theoretical foundations to contemporary issues surrounding urban restructuring, redevelopment, suburbanization and gentrification, access to and (re)creation of public vs. private spaces, modernism and post-modernism, post-colonial theory, social ramifications of restructuring of the city under capitalism, suburbanization, socio-economic polarization, urban renewal, segregation, urban poverty and uneven development, environmental racism, racial/gender differences in work opportunities, gender & labor segmentation, sexuality, crime, poverty, etc.

Work load: Class discussions (w-attendance), One short writing assignment, one midterm and a final exam plus in-class discussions (Graduate students will have one additional assignment).

Text/Readings: “The New Urban Sociology” by Gottdiener, Hutchinson and Ryan (5th Edition, 2015) Plus readings posted on Blackboard.