

Beginning The Conversation

A lecture featuring Lee Gaugh

America is in crisis! “Which one?” you might respond, and that would be a valid question. With wars and rumors of war, terrorism and national security, the polarization of political factions, slipping economic numbers, violence in our streets and a general unrest among our people, many conversations could be called for. The crisis featured in this lecture by activist Lee Gaugh, is the plight of the poor and homeless in America.

This is a conversation that Americans must have in every library, courthouse, and church, in every community. The lack of meaningful dialogue on the subject, is at the very least exasperating, and if the subject is not addressed in a comprehensive way, it will continue to erode the foundation of our nation.

Lee A. Gaugh, an advocate for the poor and homeless, Minister of the Gospel, winner of the 2019 A. Barnett Scott Community Service Award, and director of Safe Harbor, a non-profit fund of the WTH Foundation, will bring the discussion to your town. He will begin the discussion with, “How does the crisis of poverty and homelessness affect our community, and what can be done to improve the situation?”
