

Age of Migration

GEOG 444 - Spring 2021

- Beginning in Africa, we will analyze the causes and consequences of population movements throughout history.
- The growing movement of peoples across national boundaries in search of better wages, higher standards of living, and away from persecution and violence has transformed much of the world into multi-ethnic societies.
- The lectures and readings will examine the political, economic, social, security determinants of refugee and migration flows, and the political and social responses of receiving governments and societies .

 Will be taught as a Hybrid Course
